

Running a Blurry Line

Lived Experiences of Disordered Eating Among Female Distance Runners

Kennedy E. Jensen

Advisor: Elizabeth Carpenter-Song

Department of Anthropology

Dartmouth College

2018

Table of Contents

| | |
|---|------------|
| Acknowledgements..... | III |
| Chapter I – Introduction..... | 1 |
| Disordered Eating in Distance Running as Cause for Concern..... | 3 |
| Background: Existing Work Within This Realm..... | 5 |
| Significance..... | 8 |
| Overview..... | 9 |
| Chapter II - Methods..... | 11 |
| Anthropological Approach..... | 11 |
| Participants and Recruitment..... | 11 |
| Analytical Method..... | 12 |
| Scope and Limitations..... | 12 |
| Positionality..... | 14 |
| Chapter III - Running Into the Wind: Conditions of Possibility..... | 16 |
| Expectations of Excellence Through Tough Transitions..... | 16 |
| Disorder in the Pursuit of Control..... | 21 |
| Carnival Mirrors of Comparison..... | 21 |
| Chasing Role Models and Idols..... | 36 |
| Influential Figures..... | 39 |
| Chapter IV - Slipping onto a Dangerous Treadmill..... | 36 |
| Blurry Lines..... | 36 |
| The Stopwatch and the Hourglass..... | 57 |
| Treadmills of Recovery..... | 62 |
| Chapter V - Suspicions, Silence and Stigma..... | 68 |
| Holding our Tongues and Silencing Suspicions..... | 68 |
| Self-Defeating Resistance: Denial and Reluctance to Change..... | 73 |
| Too Close for Comfort? | 75 |
| Powerful Counterexamples..... | 77 |
| A Saturation of Stigma..... | 78 |
| Impersonal Dialogue Leading the Conversation..... | 80 |
| Fear of Judgment..... | 82 |
| Double Standards and Duck Syndrome..... | 88 |
| ‘Weird’ — Capturing Peculiarity But Denying Pathology..... | 90 |
| Openness and Amplification..... | 92 |
| Walking on Eggshells: The Pivotal Role of Coaches..... | 96 |
| Chapter VI - Cultural Ripples and Resonances..... | 102 |
| A Feminist Lens: Superwoman and Self-Objectification..... | 103 |
| Virtue Over Vanity: The Body as a Stage for Moralization..... | 105 |
| Acculturation in Developing a Sense of Self: Work Ethic, Sacrifice, and Self-Denial | 108 |
| Slim Margins: The Culture of Elite Universities..... | 109 |
| Socialization in Sport: Performance Pressures..... | 111 |
| A Portrait of the Perfect Storm..... | 113 |
| Chapter VII - Conclusion..... | 122 |
| Bibliography..... | 125 |

Acknowledgements

This work would not have been possible without the patience and generosity of a remarkable number of individuals. First, I would like to sincerely thank Mr. Larry B. Goodman and the Clare Garber Goodman Fund for the Anthropological Study of Human Culture for generously funding my research.

I owe the opportunity to conduct this work to Halston W. Taylor and Courtney B. Jaworski who assisted in recruiting participants and graciously allowed me to work with their teams.

I owe the deepest gratitude to Elizabeth Carpenter-Song for advising this work. It was nothing short of an honor to work under her support, guidance, and constructive criticism. I cannot imagine undertaking such an endeavor without her tireless patience and crucial perspective. Her introduction to the methodologies of cultural anthropology initially drew me into this work, and I am deeply grateful for her willingness to oversee this project. Moreover, the continuous feedback and critiques of Sumita M. Strander and Crystal A. Clements were crucial in shaping this document; I want to thank them both for the time and energy they invested in this work.

I would like to thank Kimberly A. Lyford, Michael J. Keohane, and the Dartmouth Committee for the Protection of Human Subjects for reviewing and approving this study.

I am immensely grateful to John M. Watanabe and Deborah L. Nichols for nurturing my budding interest in Anthropology and encouraging me through a challenging disengagement with collegiate athletics. Their support indirectly provided the perspective necessary to complete this work. In the moment, they stepped above and beyond their roles as educators.

I must also take this opportunity to express my gratitude to my mentors: Katherine A. Mirica, for teaching me to never tire in the pursuit of that which I believe worthy, and to forever resist allowing self-doubt to guide my decisions; Dr. Lee Witters, for teaching me the influence of mental health over our well-being, how to use our struggles as motivation for action, and the tremendous power of walking alongside a friend.

I would like to thank my family and friends for providing clarity and encouragement through this long and arduous process, for reminding me what truly matters, and for believing in me and supporting me in pursuing the questions I am most passionate about.

Finally, my sincerest gratitude to all athletes who participated in this work for making time to have these conversations, for their openness and vulnerability, and for sharing their experiences of something so painful and difficult. I was continuously amazed by the empathy, compassion, and insightful observations of both college and professional athletes. It was a privilege to speak with such courageous individuals.